

THE SITUATION

50 sales calls.

3 paying customers.

Plenty of activity at the top. Almost nothing converts at the bottom. Swipe to see what to check first.

THE PROBLEM

Meetings keep happening. Customers don't.

A full calendar feels like progress. But for a B2B startup, calls are only a signal — not the goal.

Three usual culprits:

01 Wrong audience

Calls are booked with people who can't say yes — no budget or authority.

02 Unclear value prop

Prospects can't quickly see why this matters more than what they already do.

03 No clear next step

Calls end without a concrete ask, so momentum dies after the meeting.

WHAT TO INVESTIGATE

Find exactly where the funnel breaks.

Track conversion rate at each stage — the drop-off point tells you which problem to fix first.

Calls to Meetings

82%

Meetings to Proposals

55%

Proposals to Won

10%

THE TAKEAWAY

Activity is not the same as traction.

Before booking more calls, audit the funnel — fix the weakest conversion stage before adding more volume at the top.

---

A hypothetical business situation, reimagined as a story worth sharing.